Bay-Waveland schools' proposed budget based on seven-mill increase

BY DENA BISNETTE

The Bay St. Louis-Waveland School Board is proposing a budget that could raise the district's tax levy by as much as seven mills.

In addition, Mayor Eddie Favre is concerned that the proposal may cause financial difficulty for the city and the district a couple of years down the road.

The city council, under state law, may not turn down a millage request within a limit of seven percent more than last year's budget, plus new construction and programs which are federally or state mandated.

A mill is a tax unit based on a governmental entity's assessed valuation and each mill, in this case, is worth about $52,000 based on the current valuation, Favre said.

The school district request, discussed at a public hearing Thursday, is "right at their top limit," Favre said later.

The current millage for the school district is about 43 mills as compared to about 31 for the City of Bay St. Louis and about 45 for Hancock County, added the mayor, who is also a certified public accountant.

School Board President Charles Benvenuti, another CPA, said the first four to five mills would add about $30 a year to the property taxes on a $60,000 home at 10 percent assessed valuation, the rate currently used to determine taxes on owner-occupied homes.

A $100,000 piece of commercial property would be taxed by about $75 more than last year.

These additional mills are to be used for the district maintenance fund, which covers the day-to-day operations of the school district, some bond repayment and other routine purposes, District Business Manager Garland Cuevas said.

The other two mills are for a less routine purpose because they are related to a bond issue financing the district's current building program.

Using the same $100,000 office building as an example, Benvenuti said, the taxes on a

Picayune manager's slot offered to Franckiewicz

BY D.C. HARVILL

Pending approval by the Picayune City Council, Former Mayor Victor Franckiewicz Jr. will temporarily serve as that city's business manager on an "as needed basis."

Franckiewicz did not seek reelection after current mayor Edward Favre, who was then city clerk, announced his candidacy.

A.L. Franklin, who had been Picayune's city manager, resigned from the job effective June 30. The municipality currently also is operating without a city clerk.

Franklin formerly had been an employee of the City of Bay St. Louis.

"In effect, nobody is minding the store," Franckiewicz said Saturday.

"They have indicated to me they need someone who can hit the ground running, to enact some of the things the new council wants to do," Franckiewicz said.

The former mayor said he was under the impression the Picayune council wants to take its time finding someone to fill the position.

He has not been offered the position permanently, nor has he considered it as a permanent position, he said.

"It will be with the understanding that it will only be until they find someone else or one of the positions I am seeking comes through. I think it will be interesting dealing with the business end of politics without the personal involvement in the city," he said.

Mayor's salary among highest on Gulf Coast

BY D.C. HARVILL

When Bay St. Louis Mayor Edward A. Favre was sworn in Saturday he not only gained office but also one of the highest mayoral salaries on the Coast.

In December 1988, the Bay St. Louis City Council voted to up the pay for the new mayor by 30 percent to $39,780 annually and to increase council member's salaries 100 percent to $600 per month.

The mayor will receive an annual raise based on the Consumer Price Index. The council president, currently James Thriffley III, receives an additional $50 per month.

The latest Consumer Price Index, released in May, was 6.7 percent. If the index figure were to be the same when the city's fiscal year begins in October, the mayor's salary would increase to $42,445. Bay St. Louis' population is approximately 10,000.

In comparison, Waveland's mayor is paid $990 per month for the elected office, but traditionally has also served as head of the city gas and water department for which he receives an additional $1140 monthly. The annual total is $25,560.

Waveland aldermen get $400 per month. The city's population is between 5,000 and 6,000.

The Bay St. Louis mayor's post is a full-time job, Waveland's is not.

The full-time mayoral position in Pass Christian pays $26,000 with aldermen receiving $400.

Ocean Springs, a city of 17,000, pays its mayor $36,000 and its councilmen are paid $500 per month.

Gulfport, with a population of approximately 43,000, pays its top official $48,000 annually

Superintendent's job offered to Magee

BY DENA BISNETTE

The Bay St. Louis-Waveland School Board has offered Assistant Superintendent Robert Magee a three-year contract as superintendent.

The board, which went into executive session Thursday night after a budget hearing and did not return to open session until after midnight, agreed to make the offer on a 3-1 vote.

Board President Charles Benvenuti was the only one voting against the offer. One other board member, L.D. Carter, left to go to his night-shift job before the meeting was over, Magee said.

"I think Mr. Magee is an excellent administrator and will do a very good job. However, I feel there was not a big rush to fill the position and we should have spent a little more time to make the decision," Benvenuti stated.

Gary Yarborough, Linda Penrose and William Bradley voted for the offer.

Magee, who was principal of Bay Senior High School for 14 1/2 years and has served as assistant superintendent since July 1986, will succeed Dr. Roger D. Oge if he accepts the offer.

Oge resigned in June, several weeks after the board agreed to extend his contract by one year. The new contract would have expired June 30, 1990.

Magee has until the next regularly scheduled board meeting, July 10 at 7 p.m., to accept the three-year offer. On Friday, he said he asked for a little time before accepting because he wants to discuss the matter with his family and administrators.

"I'm very pleased with the offer," he said, adding that he is also happy with the $55,000 annual salary the three-year contract proposal includes.

"I really wasn't expecting anything," he said. "I would have been happy to serve as interim superintendent if the board had asked me to do so."

Three United Ways to work together

BY DENA BISNETTE

United Way organizations in Hancock, Harrison and South Pearl River counties, while maintaining their own autonomy, will operate together as United Way of South Mississippi.

According to Charles Benvenuti, chairman of an areawide steering committee which has worked since Jan. 1 to formulate the agreement, said the United Way boards in the three counties approved a "memorandum of understanding" in May.

Services such as centralized purchasing and a central support staff at an area office in Gulfport are expected to cut down on the administrative costs of United Way, increasing the amount of money that can actually be provided to United Way agencies, added Dr. John Kelly, who represented Harrison County on the committee.

Benvenuti said each of the three counties involved will pay United Way of South Mississippi a set percentage of contributions to cover costs.

The agreement is a one-year experiment and is similar to some which have already succeeded for United Way in other states. However, Benvenuti said there are no specific figures available yet regarding how much will be saved.

In addition, the agreement is expected to help United Way better serve the 10 regional agencies, such as Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts. They will be administered through a regional committee consisting of the vice-presidents of the three counties' United Way organizations.

Benvenuti said the agreement will also protect local agencies, those which operate in only one county, by insuring that they receive at least the same amount of funding as the year before.

Other new measures make pledging contributions easier for people who live in one county and work in another, because they will be able to designate the county in which the money should be used, said Kelly.

Edith McDonald, who represented South Pearl River County United Way, said she feels the move will not only strengthen United Way's ability to serve its agencies, but will strengthen the campaign.

With centralized communications, United Way will be able to present a single, cohesive message to the public during its campaigns rather than several possibly conflicting messages.

She said this year's theme is "The Vital Link" and emphasizes the link between the donor and the agency giving the actual services.

As in past campaigns, the individual county United Way organizations will set contribution goals and may stage kickoff events, Kelly said.

However, an areawide kickoff has been set for Sept. 14. Kelly said the event will feature a Chicago Area United Way volunteer who, though handicapped, worked his way to the rank of Eagle in Boys Scouts, put himself through school and is now employed.

The agreement to operate United Way of South Mississippi will last one year. At that and council members get $1000 each month.

Long Beach's mayor currently gets $32,352. Councilmen receive $400.

Bay St. Louis's current mayor's salary is based on an average of figures suggested by the council members who were serving at that time.

Since adopting the pay increase, three new members have been elected to the council. In January, Charles Scianna and James Rutherford claimed seats vacated when members Lisa Coward and Wilmer Seymour were elected to the Hancock County Board of Supervisors. They retained their positions in the recent regular election.

Also new on the council is Thomas Favre, having bested Charles Johnson for the Ward Three spot.

Of the council that voted for the pay hikes, only John Wilkerson and Thrifley remain to benefit.

clerk position at his first city council meeting.

The clerk's job was vacated by Favre Saturday when he was sworn in as mayor of the city.

Johnson currently is employed with Charles Benvenutti, Certified Public Accountant as an office manager. She has degrees in accounting and computer science, Favre said.

"I will recommend that she be offered the job for the duration of my administration," Favre added.

Final approval for the mayor's recommendation is the responsibility of city council.

Reflections On Life

By Father Jerome
LeDoux, SVD

For God's sake

Cruising down an interstate highway at 11 p.m. can be quite uneventful, sometimes to the point of tedium. So it was that Monday night, the cruise control set to carry me effortlessly at the legal 65 m.p.h.

To exit or not to exit, was uppermost in my mind, while I pondered the pros and cons of tanking up with gas.

My mind finally made up, I slipped into the outer lane on the right, then began decelerating for the exit. Spying a car parked on the shoulder, I drifted left to give it extra space. At that moment, my eyes blinked in disbelief to see another car to the left, totally immobile in the center line, its lights blinking.

Gliding between the two with some uneasiness, I looked back through the rear view mirror. My breath caught momentarily when it seemed that I was watching a very bad movie. Perhaps 200 feet behind me, an 18-wheeler, without slowing down, plowed into the car stalled in the center line.

A huge fireball lit up the highway. Looking like a titanic, fire-breathing monster in the act of devouring its hapless prey, the 18-wheeler veered to the right, crushing the stalled, flaming car ahead of it, until it powered the inferno into the ditch.

Momentarily, I debated stopping, but realized that there was nothing that I could do. Taking better counsel, I exited, ran into a convenience store, and without greeting, yelled to the attendants to call the police.

Half a dozen patrol cars or more, lights flashing and sirens screaming, quickly materialized out of the darkness, followed by fire trucks and a couple of ambulances.

As I stood staring vacantly to the night, the 18-wheeler and the fireball repeatedly passing before my memory screen, flashbacks from 20 years go began to crowd my mind. At that distant time of yesteryear, my younger brother, his wife and then toddler son were stranded on a four-mile highway bridge when the coil on their car's engine burned out.

Within minutes after the wife and child had been taken to a nearby town, the car was rear-ended by a speeding car and mashed to accordion proportions.

Stalling on a bridge is one thing, but, for God's sake, if you stall on an open highway, let your car coast as far off the highway as possible. Stopping anywhere on the highway surface is just a recipe for a disaster waiting to happen.

For God's sake, Paul would say, "Defer to another out of reverence for Christ (Eph. 5:21). For God's sake, if not for your own and your neighbor's, leave the highways clear of clutter, especially clutter the size of a car or truck.

Accidents will inevitably happen as an inseparable part of our weak, myopic, deficient human condition, but at least we can try hard to be aware of each other at all times and to keep obstacles out of the way of unsuspecting highway travelers. The bottom line there could easily be one or more lives, or even your very own.

But, mind you, deferring to one another in the words of Paul does not begin on the road or the open highway. Rather, it is a gradual unfolding which should begin right after the cradle, with a growing awareness that the world does not revolve around us.

This growing awareness tells us that it is not only tacky but dangerous to leave the floor, the sidewalk or the ground mined with objects such as marbles, balls, skateboards and banana peel.

For God's sake, do not wait for a monstrous fireball at your heels to make you understand how important, and often urgent, it is to defer to one another at home, at school, at church, everywhere.

Laity leaders urge new images

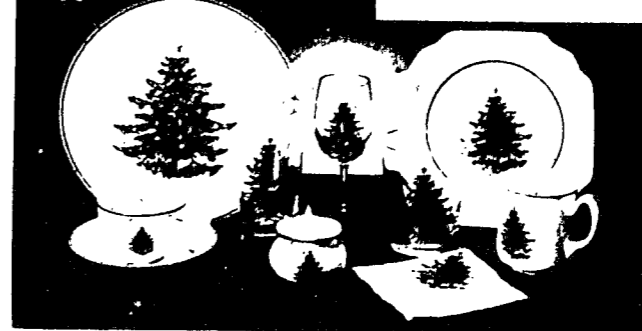

In Jackson recently the Conference Lay Leaders of the Mississippi and North Mississippi Conferences of the United Methodist Church challenged the new Mississippi Conference to claim new images and seize new opportunities.

In a Laity Address delivered at a conference in Jackson recently, Mrs. R.R. (Twick) Morrison said, "Come image with me. I have an image of a people of piety...a people with concern for others...and a people of God in Mississippi who live in this place and love this place, but who live their lives in a global perspective, with a global understanding.

Morrison summarized the images as "A people who love God; a people who serve others; a people who can be together so much more than we can ever be separately."

Quinn Mattox told the group the only real basis for unity is in "one real Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of us all."

Honor or desecrate,
there is no choice!

Tuesday is our nation's 213th birthday, a day on which flags are flown on high everywhere.

On this Fourth of July, flags all over our nation will be flying high, yet the meaning will not be the same to Americans as it has in the past because of a recent Supreme Court decision to allow indiscriminate burning of the most recognizable symbol of freedom throughout the world.

The action of the court contravenes every precept that we, as mere children learned with regard to treatment of our nation's flag: never let it touch the ground, salute, hand over heart, and so on. These things, trite to some, have a place in the heart of every real American.

Where are we as a people being led?

Throughout its history, the United States of America, right, wrong or indifferent, has gone to the battlefields of the world as a champion of those who wish to fly that symbol of freedom—their flag. No one under the guise of the freedoms of the First Amendment has the 'right' to desecrate our national banner in any way whatsoever.

The American flag is only a piece of cloth, but our right to display and treat it in an honorable fashion came at an enormous price. The blood of so many young Americans is deeply imbedded in the soil of countries all over the world. Why? Freedom!

We've made bad judgements during our relatively short life as a nation, but the flag burning decision of the court has to rank right at the top of the list.

Though our standards are becoming extremely fragile these days, they can be strengthened through the personification of the American dream and the judicious use of the knowledge that freedom is the first cousin of wisdom.

Surely, the interpretation of the members of the Supreme Court should be questioned. To openly permit the desecration of The Stars and Stripes in the streets of towns and cities is reprehensible.

You, as 'Free Americans' do have the right to feel, and don't wait until tomorrow. Sit down today and write to your senator and representative at both state and federal levels. Insist that they take immediate steps to right this wrong foisted upon freedom-loving Americans everywhere by the nation's highest court.

The American way of life is still the best deal going.

Our national pride in our flag and the fundamental rights it represents is an integral and necessary ingredient of that way of life.

QUOTES"

By Ellis C. Cuevas

The long Fourth of July weekend will mean an extra number of vehicles on our highways and roadways.

Even on Friday I noticed an increase in traffic about town and this will also mean a potential increase in the number of accidents.

It will be wise to be extremely careful even when driving about town.

Many of us will have to work on Monday and this will mean a split holiday with the Fourth being on a Tuesday.

I hope the rain will let up so folks will be able to complete their holiday plans.

The winds and rains are not too good for the big fishing rodeo in Gulfport which will end on Tuesday.

I hope those who do go fishing will keep a close eye on the weather as thunderstorms and squalls can develop rapidly this time of year.

It is not a good feeling to be caught out on a boat in a thunderstorm and squall.

The food is delicious at the annual Our Lady of the Gulf Crab Festival. I hope to get some more today before the festival is history for another year.

Have a happy and safe Fourth of July!

Our Bay St. Louis officials for the next four years were sworn in on Saturday and we wish them a lot of luck.

I have known Mayor Edward A. Favre for many years as well as Councilmen James J. Rutherford, Charles C. Scianna, James C. Thriffley III, Thomas Farve and John W. Wilkerson.

I hope the next four years will be one of cooperation between our elected officials and residents of Bay St. Louis. This will be a great benefit for everyone.

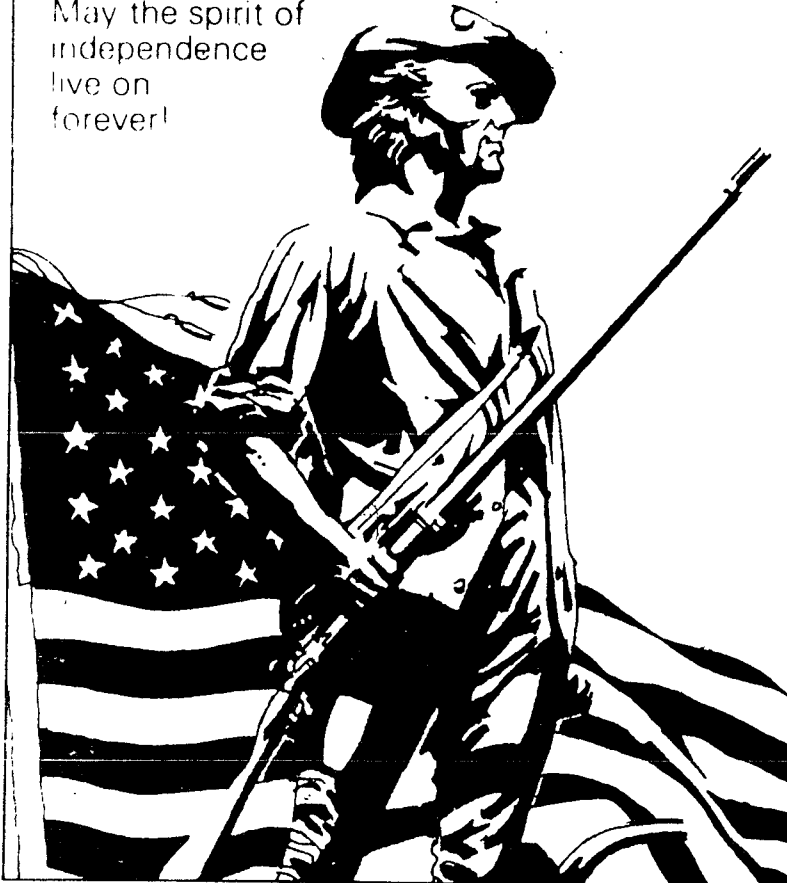

Bay St. Louis has come a long way in recent years and we need to continue moving forward.

The political atmosphere in our county has been also improving in recent years and we hope the cooperation between the cities and county's elected officials will continue.

Best of luck to everyone

Proclaim Liberty
Throughout the Land!

On this 4th of July, we join in celebrating our most precious freedoms which our forefathers fought to preserve. May the spirit of independence live on forever!

FROM THE CAPITOLBy Governor
Ray MabusAmerica's freedom should be remembered on July 4th

As a boy growing up in Ackerman, I know what Independence Day meant to me: There were family gatherings, home-cooked food and fireworks, if we were good. There was always the flag and my father would carefully fold it each year for important days, most of all, Independence Day.

Whatever Independence Day means to you, think about it and hard this year. Don't take it for granted because it has never meant more than it does today.

Think about Mississippians away in foreign lands thinking our country. Recently I was privileged to write to our brave men and women in the military who would give anything to be in our shoes this Independence Day. In the end, they will be trying to create a good, old-fashioned July 4th on Torrejon Air Force Base in Spain.

This Independence Day is special to me because this year I have seen firsthand a region of the world that does not know the kind of freedom and security that we do in the United States of America.

In the Far East, many countries are threatened by internal wars. Many stare uneasily at their borders at each other.

There is a part of the world with which we must deal. This is a part of the world that affects us here in America. But despite what some would have us believe, our nation is the envy of the world because of our security and our freedom—a freedom unprecedented in the history of the world.

What makes our democracy so great is that this freedom so feared by leaders of other countries of the world is exactly what makes us so strong. We see it at work every day.

Freedom is the right to challenge the status quo—to say there is a better way of doing things.

Freedom is the power of the ballot box and the power of the people to set government policy by their active involvement—whether it be through the local school board, the city council, state government or the federal government.

Freedom is the right of each individual to be treated like every other individual in the way the Founders intended when they wrote: "We the People..."

Most of all, freedom is the right of every person to live in a country full of possibilities instead of a country oppressed by obstacles.

As we recognize Independence Day, we should ask ourselves: "What price will we pay to keep our freedom?"

We can start by celebrating July 4th by displaying the flag or ringing a bell as the signers of the Declaration of Independence did 213 years ago. More importantly, we can live up to the ideals of this nation and never, ever take for granted our freedom and what it gives us.

FROM THE
CAPITOLBy Representative
J.P. ComprettaSeveral new state laws take effect

Drug peddlers arrested near schools face tough new penalties; financial incentives are offered to new and expanding businesses for creating jobs; thousands of retired public employees receive increased retirement benefits; and the general limitation on filing damage suits in Mississippi is reduced from six to three years.

These are some of the new state laws scheduled to take effect on July 1 after being approved by the Mississippi legislature earlier this year. In most instances, implementation of the laws was delayed until July to coincide with the start of the state's fiscal year and give agencies time to get ready for the changes.

Several other 1989 laws already have gone into effect.

Overall, more than 580 bills were approved by both House and Senate during the three-month-long session dealing with such wide-ranging issues as education, economic development, government reorganization, drug abuse, drunk driving, tort reform, Medicaid eligibility, highway maintenance, and beaver eradication.

The Legislature approved a record-high general fund budget totaling $1.902 billion for the fiscal year 1989-90, including increases in funding for public schools, higher education, Medicaid, mental health and economic development programs. There were no general tax increases.

The new drug abuse law provides sharply increased penalties for the illegal sale or distribution of drugs within 1,500 feet of elementary and secondary school buildings and 1,000 feet of school property. Judges are authorized to impose double the criminal penalties for violating drug laws if the offense occurs within the specified distance from a school, and up to three times the penalty for any subsequent violation.

In addition, the 1989 law provides that anyone who is 21 or over will face a mandatory life sentence, without parole, if convicted of large-scale drug sales within a 12-month period.

Another law taking effect in July allows wiretapping of suspected drug dealers by state narcotics agents under certain conditions.

Income tax credits will be offered to various types of businesses for creating new jobs in Mississippi under one of a series of economic development bills approved this year. The package was hailed by economic development specialists as "the most aggressive set of changes related to economic development offered by any state."

Several changes were approved in the public employees' retirement program including a 5 percent boost in retirement benefits, effective July 1, for several thousand public workers at both state and local levels. The formula for calculating future benefits also was revised, and public employees with at least 25 years' service were given an option to retire at 55 without giving up part of their benefits.

Among the hotly contested issues of 1989 was a tort reform bill which calls for a number of changes in civil justice laws. The new law, taking effect July 1, reduces the general statute of limitations for filing damage suits from six to three years, modifies the doctrine of joint and several liability in cases involving more than one defendant, allows judges to fix interest rates on a judgment, and provides for the two-year statute of limitations in a medical malpractice case involving children to start to run when the child reaches age six rather than 16.

Also, the law prohibits filing out-of-state suits in Mississippi if the time has expired for bringing suit in the state where the alleged wrong occurred.

Other major legislation taking effect July 1 includes a modified government reorganization plan approved by lawmakers; a revision of laws related to student transfers; a tough new drunk driving statute; and an act calling for development of a statewide beaver control program.

The law which expands Medicaid eligibility and makes other changes in the Medicaid program also took effect July 1 although some of the changes will be phased in over a period of time. The same act provided for closing the state-funded charity hospitals at Meridian, Vicksburg and Laurel at the end of Fiscal Year 1989.

The law providing for a uniform system of education for gifted children carried an effective date of July 1, 1989. Under this act, all local districts are mandated to have programs of gifted education approved by the Department of Education by the start of the 1992-93 school year, provided sufficient funding is available.

Some of the other 1989 laws taking effect on July 1:

Make it illegal in Mississippi to operate an automatic telephone dialing-announcing device for the purpose of making a sales pitch; crack down on car thefts by making it a felony to operate "chop shops" where vehicles are dismantled and parts then sold; impose a maximum fine of $1,000 and up to a year in prison for unlawfully driving vehicles with out-of-state license tags or tags issued for other vehicles;

Provide state oversight on certain hazardous waste facilities; require insurance companies to give at least 30 days written notice before canceling liability or fire insurance policies; prohibit insurance companies from requiring that repairs to a motor vehicle be made by a particular repair shop; authorize the Health Department to certify bottled water sources for suppliers as safe; require health care providers and medical examiners to report AIDS-related deaths to the Health Department;

Establish a student loan program to assist people wishing to study nursing and other health care fields where a critical need exists; give the College Board more flexibility in establishing off-campus courses; create a special arbitration council to handle complaints between consumers and people or firms selling agricultural seed; create a Children's Trust Fund to assist programs and services for prevention of child abuse and neglect;

Modify the state's Certificates of Need law to authorize 602 additional nursing home beds around the state; require the State Highway Department to handle maintenance on U.S. highways replaced by interstate highways or the state's four-lane system; update laws dealing with the youth courts; require residential child-care homes to report certain basic information about their operations to the State Health Department; provide for the Welfare Department to investigate allegations of child abuse which arise in child custody proceedings; Increase the statute of limitations for prosecuting felonious child abuse charges from two to seven years; extend the law providing for state inmates to be lodged in county jails because of crowded prison conditions; authorize the issuance of $150 million in bonds under a revamped Mississippi Home Corporation program to provide loans for low and moderate income rental and residential housing; and grant an exemption from the state's use tax on religious literature, slides and video tapes used by churches and other religious institutions.

Fourth of July belongs to families

Fourth of July is an interesting holiday because, to me, it brings back the past.

It doesn't bring back my personal past because I haven't got very many Fourth of July memories.

My family had few large family gatherings because we didn't have relatives living any closer than Texas. We went there once for the Fourth, when I was about eight, and I had a blast.

The next July 4 family celebration I can remember didn't happen until I was past 20 and my Aunt Evelyn and Uncle Ed had moved to Collins. All eight of us who live in Mississippi were there, but eight people don't make a very big party.

Other people have told me of July 4 weekend reunions, cook-outs, church fairs like the one at St. Rose and local events like the Crab Festival.

Now, I'm a big fan of local events like summer festivals and go to them as often as I can. I like the atmosphere, but I notice it more than ever on the Fourth.

The Fourth is a real family-oriented holiday.

I was single until just last year, so I had more of a chance to observe families than most people did.

I saw a lot of families with more than one generation together, with children, parents, grandparents and even great-grandparents all celebrating at once.

The only unhappy face I've seen on a Fourth of July during the past few years belonged to a kid holding a stickful of cotton candy he had dropped in the dirt.

That's why I say Fourth of July takes me into the past. In our highly mobile society, family gatherings are now almost always missing somebody who lives too far away, can't get time off from work or simply has too many other commitments. Families aren't falling apart as much as they're moving apart.

There's also something about the red-white-and-blue type of patriotism common to July 4 celebrations which brings old ideals in the backs of people's minds back to the forefront: families, love of one's country, unquestioning loyalty and good, clean, drug-free fun.

I saw that patriotism die here during the Vietnam era, enjoy a brief revival in 1976 during the country's bicentennial, then lay dormant again until a Hollywood president brought it back to life.

I'm not the sort of person who believes in the 1950s-early 60s television world, where Father always knows best even if it's something he's never even encountered before and where June only has to worry about whether she can prepare a decent dinner for Ward at the same time she keeps the Beaver out of trouble.

That's a nice world, where Opie says "yes" to fishing and never has to even consider whether to say "no" to drugs, but it's not very practical.

We are living in a world where people get divorced, children are confronted by issues that used to affect only adults and the majority of women work outside the home.

Maybe I'm more aware of families because I feel the crunch of the modern world on my own.

My husband's relatives, most of whom I have only met three times, live so far north they're almost in Tennessee, so I seldom visit them.

I don't visit my parents as much as I used to because it has become harder and harder to get the whole family together for a weekend gathering: that's despite the fact I am the only one in my immediate family living more than 25 miles from Mom and Dad.

I know I am not alone in this. I believe it's the major reason I tend to emphasize the importance of family in my writing whenever I can.

It's also the reason I think people should cherish holidays like Fourth of July.

COOKING UP A STORM

By Katy McGuire
Caire

A mouth-watering collection of favorite recipes from celebrity chefs to recipes from faculty and staff and from parents and grandparents to the youngest members of the freshman class—that's the Mandeville High PTSA Cookbook, a joint and delightful effort of the Mandeville High School Parent-Teacher-Student Association, (Mandeville, La.)

And highly 'cookable' as well—that's how I rate and judge cookbooks, as to whether the recipes are good to cook as well as to read about, and I'm happily working, or, rather cooking my way through the book!

Of course, I also have a special interest in this cookbook, with two of my grandsons graduates of Mandeville High, and the other four either already studying at Mandeville High or working their way up the classroom ladder to high school! But, even aside from that, I'm really enjoying this collection.

The hundreds of recipes range from easy to elegant, with something for varied tastes and ways of cookery. There's a section on Celebrity Chefs, with recipes for Cajun Catfish, Creole Beef, Peaches and Cream Pie and Crawfish Francis, among others.

In addition to the usual categories, there's a special section on microwave dishes, one on low-cal favorites and on casseroles and cooking for a crowd. And the dessert sections are a sweet-lover's dream!

'Delicious' is the word for the Steak Sauce recipe in the Celebrity Chef's section—from Jack McGuire, councilman-at-large for the City of Mandeville, and my son, by the way.

Both Jack and his bother, Bill, are quite at home and adept in the kitchen and at the grill and have been since they were young boys, I'm happy to say. I'm an advocate of the equal opportunity for guys and gals! Here's Jack's:

STEAK SAUCE

2 cups ketchup
2 sticks butter or margarine, cut into bits
1/2 cup Worcestershire sauce
4 Tblsp. fresh lemon juice
Dash Tabasco

Combine all ingredients in a saucepan and cook over low heat, stirring frequently, until the butter is melted and the ingredients are well blended. Serve the sauce hot. (Approximately 4 cups.)

(The chef's comments: This is a good sauce to serve over steaks, or along side them on the plate to dip cut pieces of meat.)

Also delicious is Mandeville High Principal James Robertson's recipe for

BARBECUED PORK CHOPS (Oven)

8 lean pork chops
1/2 cup catsup
1 tsp. salt
1 tsp. celery seed
1/2 tsp. nutmeg
1/3 cup vinegar
1 cup water
1 bay leaf

Brown chops in hot fat. Combine remaining ingredients; pour over chops. Bake at 325 degrees for 1 1/2 hours. Turn chops once during baking. (Serves 8).

I've relished a number of various ways to cook chicken wings, for that's my favorite part of the chicken, and really enjoy this recipe from Susan Burton and daughter, Wendy Burton, grade 10. Here's LOUISIANA BUFFALO WINGS

The original Buffalo wings recipe may have come from Buffalo, but I like this Louisiana version better. It's easy, also. It calls for Louisiana hot sauce to taste, along with a cup of butter or margarine and the chicken wings. Just melt the butter with the hot sauce and pour over the wings to cover. Bake at 350 degrees until done, 45 minutes usually.

(Chef's Comments: Can use any chicken parts you wish. Fast and easy. And, Wendy adds that she uses equal parts of hot sauce and butter.) If you don't like yours that spicy hot, just use less hot sauce.

Oh, I'm running out of space—you'll just have to get the book for yourself and seek out 'Green Rice' and 'Walnut Chicken' and 'Strawberry Bread' and 'Microwave Crawfish Etouffee' and 'Fudge Pie' and 'Fudge Sundae Pie' and all the others. The book may be ordered ($9 per book plus $1.50 for postage and handling) from Mandeville High PTSA Cookbook, c/o Mrs. Linda Y. Berg, 240 Cyprus, Mandeville, La. 70448. And, enjoy!

Winn-Dixie effort helps the hungry

Winn-Dixie Stores Inc. and The Salvation Army have raised $52,195 this year in their 'Even It Up' program to fight hunger.

The program was introduced in January in Winn-Dixie southern retail locations, giving customers the opportunity to 'even up' their total bill to the nearest dollar for the hungry.

For example, if a Winn-Dixie customer has a total purchase of $24.75, he or she can tell the cashier to even it up to $25. The difference is automatically credited to the 'Even It Up For The Hungry Fund.' A printout of the tax deductible contribution appears on the customer's cash register receipt.

The change donated by the customers goes into a fund for The Salvation Army which is responsible for identifying families with the greatest need in Winn-Dixie trade areas.

For certificates redeemable at Winn-Dixie stores are distributed by The Salvation Army to 15 households for nutritional and important necessities.

BWYC is host to U.S. Women's Sailing eliminations July 8 & 9

Special to the Echo
The Bay-Waveland Yacht Club will host the semi-final eliminations for the U.S. Women's Sailing Championship for the Adams Trophy on July 8 and 9. This elimination will determine the Area D representative to the finals to be held in Milwaukee Aug. 28-31.

Area D is composed of four Yacht Racing Associations—Dixie, Florida, Gulf and South Atlantic. There will be six entries in the competition with the host association and next year's host each allowed two teams: Gulf and South Atlantic.

The skippers are Sandy Scheda, Tampa; Sally Morriss, Birmingham, Ellen Eagen, Bay St. Louis; Kathy Inman, Westwego, La.; Sara Weiss, Columbia, S.C.; and Chris Samuelson, Augusta, Ga.

The Adams semi-finals and finals will be sailed in privately owned Lightning Class boats from New Orleans and Mobile. Each skipper will sail each boat in a round robin series. Some spectator boats will be available or races may be watched from the yacht club.

Harry Chapman of BWYC is general chairman of the event.

The BWYC entry is Ellen Eagan with crew Judy McKinney and Missy Breath to represent the yacht club in the U.S. Sailing Championship. BWYC has had two firsts and a third in this competition for the Adams Cup which started in 1924.

In 1977 Cindy Stieffel, with crew Amy Chapman and Judy McKinney, won with the best record of finishes ever, seven first places and one second.

In 1980 Judy McKinney, with crew Amy Chapman and Charlotte Gordon, won with the second best record of finishes, four firsts, three seconds, and one third.

In 1978 the BWYC team finished third sailing Shields, a 30-foot keel boat at Newport, R.I. This was a completely unknown boat to the local team. Cindy Stieffel, Skipper, and crew Judy McKinney, Ellen Eagan and Amy Chapman.

Lung Association to celebrate NonDependence Day

On July 5, NonDependence Day, thousands of Mississippians will join millions of Americans across the nation in declaring their Freedom From Smoking.

The Mississippi Lung Association—the Christmas Seal People—is participating in the first national NonDependence Day to inform nicotine addicted smokers that there is help in the battle to be free of cigarettes.

"Nicotine addiction is a continuing process from the very first puff, and quitting is an ongoing and difficult process—not just a one-shot deal," said Dr. Boyd Shaw, president of MLA.

Last year, the Surgeon General reported that nicotine is the drug in tobacco that causes addiction.

The American Lung Association's Freedom From Smoking programs address the specific behavioral problems of breaking the bonds of nicotine addiction, enabling the smoker to overcome the many threatening obstacles that are encountered along the road to freedom from smoking.

The 1989 Report of the Surgeon General reaffirms earlier reports that smoking is the single most important preventable cause of premature death in our society.

The report confirms that anti-smoking efforts, like the ALA's Freedom from Smoking materials and clinics, have led million of people to stop smoking—or never to start. The same efforts will eventually postpone or avoid approximately 2.9 million deaths between the years of 1964 and 2000.

A simple written test to help smokers determine the level of their nicotine dependency, as well as information on ALA's stop-smoking programs are available at area pharmacies, hospitals and the Mississippi Lung Association.

Supported through a grant from Lakeside Pharmaceuticals, NonDependence Day is also a day when the nonsmoking family and friends of smokers declare their support and aid in helping their loved ones to quit.

For more information, contact the Mississippi Lung Association, 353 N. Mart Plaza, Jackson, MS 39206, 601-362-5453.

Children's art class shows love of America

BY DENA BISNETTE

Students in Mardranne Zachary's art class have been learning more than art as they work on a Fourth of July project.

Zachary, whose real name is Marjorie Anne, teaches classes several days a week at Toad-in-the-Hole gift shop. The youngsters in her classes have been working on the Fourth of July theme for about three weeks now, expressing how they feel about living in America with materials ranging from pastels to glitter.

"Children need to know about these things, and how will they learn if we don't tell them?" she asked.

Zachary has many years of experience in teaching, having started by assisting her mother, an art teacher, in her native Baton Rouge, La., in 1964. Through the years, she has found that children can be heavily influenced by the attitudes of their parents.

Zachary teaches a varied age group, starting with children as young as five. Her oldest student this summer, 15-year-old Lela Odom, is helping her teach the smaller children.

Zachary stresses creativity. She teaches the basic fundamentals of drawing because "You can't paint it if you can't draw it" and makes sure her students are familiar with the methods of working in all types of media.

"We do all the crafts, woodwork, paper mache', decoupage...I use the crafts as a kind of break in the monotony of always doing pictures, because the child's familiarity with all these materials can carry over into school projects later."

"There are certain rules they have to learn but you have got to allow them to think for themselves, too," the teacher added, explaining that she tries to help her students learn to notice, on their own, such elements of art as the blending of colors.

She gives them a theme for a project but does not believe in limiting what they can do with it, such as the red, white and blue Fourth of July project.

"I could have just said, 'Do it this way,' but when I let them think for themselves, they come up with some darling things and that's the child's own work."

Many of the drawings depicted Fourth of July celebrations. Some, like one drawn by a little girl about eight, showed things familiar to them in everyday life—the child used the beach as the setting for her drawing, showing palm trees, shells, fish and a happy crab. "You see a lot of that," Zachary commented.

Others interpreted memories of other Fourth of July holidays or showed their ideal Fourth of July.

A third part of the project was a large sign Zachary's husband built and put up on the front of the pink cottage housing Toad-in-the-Hole.

"I let them vote what to put on the sign, because I felt they fully understood about China," she said, adding that she felt allowing the children to express their love for their country in such a public manner was important to the entire project.

They chose to say, "We love you, America."

"I wanted this Fourth of July to be special to them," she said.

The finished projects adorn the walls of her studio at Toad-in-the-Hole, supplied to her

Mardranne Zachary, Julie Cotton and Kate Martin

after a local printer, Allison Keller, suggested the shop as a possible location for a summer art program. Zachary, who is teaching her first class since moving back to the South last year, found owners Betty Stechmann and Claudia Burch to be enthusiastic about having the children there.

Some of the Fourth of July works may turn up later this summer. Although a specific date has not been set, Zachary, Stechmann and Burch are planning an outdoor art show in August, with Zachary's students as featured artists.

"I think the show is a super way of letting them show off what they can do," Zachary said.

"When any child has done something and has done a good job on it, show appreciation for it. That's how children improve. If you show them appreciation, they'll do even better next time, and better and better and better."

Eleanore Bernadas

While the youngest may not truly understand what living in the United States means, they do have their own interpretations of some of the basic ideals and symbols like the American flag.

One five-year-old, for example, depicted the flag as almost all red-and-white stripes. Tucked away in a top corner is a tiny spot of blue with five silver stars on it.

"That's the way she sees it now. When she watches it wave, she notices the stripes. As she grows older, this area of blue will probably expand," Zachary stated.

"I work with these children and find I can emotionally relate that age. I can remember the things they remember, the first day of school or the first day of kindergarten, and it's so vivid; I know how they feel."

Zachary was watching television and heard about the students protesting in China when she thought of the Fourth of July project, which so far has yielded a collection of red, white and blue placards trimmed with glitter, paints and paste-on foil stars.

Many depict the child's interpretation of flags or traditional symbols of America like eagles, but others stand out from the group, like the one which consists of a set of big red lips with the slogan, "I Kiss You, America."

"These kids did a terrific job, and what they did was not easy," their teacher

Zachary has also found that children are more aware of the world than they were when she was a child or when she first began teaching.

"These are T.V. children. They've grown up in a really different world from the one I knew...I grew up in the world of imagination," she said. "There were no T.V.s then, so we used imagination a lot to occupy ourselves."

"The older ones have seen television and they definitely understand. Seeing things like the news from China had given them a greater appreciation of the U.S."

"I think parents and teachers, too, should show how they feel about America because attitudes are catching. The children will pick that up," she added.

"I remember growing up in World War II. I didn't exactly understand why we would stop and pick up metal and all for recycling drives back then, but I felt like it was the right thing to do. I knew it had something to do with pride in my country."

The pastel drawings gave the children a chance to show more about how they feel about their country than the red, white and blue placards.

Attention focuses on 1990 varieties

By Dr. Milo Burnham
Horticulturist
Mississippi Cooperative
Extension Service

We haven't had a chance to judge how the new varieties for 1989 will do in this season's gardens, but already the all-America Selections for 1990 have been announced. Fair or not, we shouldn't complain because four vegetables are among the 10 winners for 1990, and there wasn't a single vegetable in this year's top 10.

Along with the four vegetables are four flowers and two bedding plant winners. Seeds of these 10 new varieties won't be on the market until next year.

Summer Pastels Achillea, the 1990 winner, is perennial and grows easily from seed. It provides a variety of colors in shades of soft pink, rose, red, apricot, cream, beige, earthy yellow, lavender, purple and pure white. Up until now, the colors of a hillea I've seen were yellow, red and pink. Chellea is a long-time popular flower for cutting and drying. Summer pastels have smaller and more manageable plants that get about 2 feet tall and are described as being heat and weather tolerant.

Celisia Castle Pink is the second flower winner. This plant-type celisia is a distinct color not previously available. The plants grow 12 to 14 inches tall with thick, several inches long, the long-lasting plume.

The third flower winner is a pansy. Jolly Joker pansy has the unusual color combination of a bright orange face surrounded by velvety purple. The plants are described as early flowering, compact and above average for pansies in heat and weather tolerance.

The fourth 1990 flower winner is Scarlet Splendor Zinnia.

in Mississippi Gardens

This hybrid has 4- to 5-inch scarlet, semi-ruffled blooms that are ideal for cutting on plants that get about two feet tall.

The two award winning bedding plants are both petunias. Polo Burgundy Star has a central white star in the 2-inch burgundy blooms. The other petunia is Polo Salmon. The plants are prolific bloomers starting early and going through the summer. The single, salmon colored blooms are about two inches across.

Derby bush green bean is the first of the vegetable winners. The plants are reported as resistant to lodging (falling over) and common bean mosaic. The pods are long and thin, round and tender. Seed development in the pods is slow, providing usable harvests at the larger pod sizes.

Super Cayenne Pepper is a 3- to 4-inch pepper that can be harvested at both the green and red stages. It is of course hot. The plants get about 2 feet tall and about as wide and are adapted to container culture.

With its bright red pepper, super cayenne, makes a nice ornamental plant.

The last two vegetable winners for 1990 are both squash. Cream Of The Crop is a white acorn squash. The flesh is creamy golden with a nutty flavor. The bush-type plants don't require much garden space. With the introduction of Cream Of The Crop, gardeners now have green, yellow and white acorn squash.

Sun Drops is a yellow summer squash with no neck. The yellow squash are oval in shape and can be harvested up to a 3- or 4-inch diameter. The plants make a compact bush and are grown like any other summer bush-type squash.

The Hancock County Board of Supervisors has approved a $10 million industrial development bond issue for a new fish farm to be located near Ansley.

The farm is proposed by Robert Hunt, who already owns The Redfish Hatchery Inc. in Pass Christian, Mississippi. Hunt said he located the 1,470-acre site for the new facility, where he will call Sea Fresh Farm Inc., with the assistance of the Hancock County Port Harbor Commission.

Industrial development bonds, according to Board Attorney Gerald Gex, must be issued through the county and repaid by the developer. Therefore, the county is under no obligation.

In addition to producing about one million pounds of seafood annually, Hunt expects the business to provide about 300 jobs initially.
